Spanish town struggles to reconcile locals as extremist cell

(RIPOLL, Spain) — They were brothers and boyhood friends, known in their Catalan village for their close relationship. But the two men, both suspected of being members of an extremist cell that carried out attacks in Spain, had little in common except for their upbringing by their mothers. They were linked to Memes, a group linked to IS in Syria, by their upbringing in Ripoll, an agricultural town famous for its cheese and a white church. The mountains known for their monasteries and picturesque villages are also home to karsh and kuthop shops.

But in recent days, police believe, the young men were drawn to something else. The mayor of the town has alleged that a plot was murdered on a mountain pass in the Pyrenees region, six kilometers (three miles) south of Spain's border with France.

"We need to know where they are," the mayor, Andreu Guiguer, said. "We need to know how many people are in the cell."

The Civil Guard, Spain's national police force, has called for the services to be attended by police who have been granted a plan to arrest those suspected of being involved in the attack.

"The Federal Police, the Army and the Civil Guard must be on the lookout," the mayor said. "We need to know what they are doing."

The American embassy in Madrid has warned that any steps to disrupt the planning of the attack "should be monitored by the authorities." The embassy has not commented on the alleged plot.

On Sunday, Spain's Interior Ministry said that the government had ordered police to be deployed in the town of Ripoll, a small town in the Pyrenees region, to prevent a possible attack.

"We are taking all necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of our citizens," the ministry said. "We are working closely with local authorities to ensure that all steps are taken to prevent any possible attack.

The government has also ordered the military to be on standby in the event of a possible attack.

Jerry Lewis, comedy icon and telethon host, dies at 91

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Lewis, the Don Rickles of the Dean Martin Era and Hollywood star who brought laughter to the masses on television and in movies for more than six decades, died Sunday. He was 91.

Lewis' death was announced by his publicist David Danielson, who said the comedian was surrounded by family on Sunday afternoon.

“Jerry’s life was one of laughter, love and charity, and he lived it with his whole heart and soul,” Danielson said.

The smaller-than-life comedian and actor was known for his eccentric funnyman persona, and the off-color jokes he delivered with deadpan authority. He won the Academy Award for his performance in “The King of Comedy” in 1983.

Republicans have a new reason to support Obamacare

President Donald Trump’s threat to “let Obamacare implode” took a new, meaner turn last week, when a report issued Tuesday by a government agency that found such a strategy could lead to, among other things, higher health-care costs in future years. Congressional Republicans are desperate for a new reason to support the law that tax codes could provide that victory (along with a much-needed change of topic) that victory (along with a much-needed change of topic) — because of an apparent misreading of the law, the payments are not automatic and the president has the authority to end them. Obamacare insurance companies would be rolled, and the law’s budgeting companies would have to raise by an estimated 20 percent. But that’s not all. It would not cause a lot of people to lose insurance, the law’s budgeting companies would instead mean the government would have to pay in more money. The government would qualify for direct sub- sidies if the law’s budgeting reducing levels are discontinued

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the editor:

The Recorder is a valuable source of information and entertainment for the community of Montgomery County. It provides an excellent platform for sharing local news, opinions, and events. As a regular reader, I have found the newspaper to be a reliable source of information and have appreciated the diverse range of topics covered.

However, I recently discovered that the newspaper has stopped publishing letters to the editor. I believe this decision is a significant loss for the community, as letters to the editor provide a platform for residents to express their views and engage in healthy dialogue.

I urge the newspaper to reconsider this decision and reinstate letters to the editor. Their absence from the newspaper has left a void that needs to be filled. I hope the newspaper will take steps to address this issue and continue to provide a platform for community members to share their perspectives.

Sincerely,

“A view of the入库门 at Hammondville High School in Fultonville.

Raising money for local organizations is something that the Hammondville High team takes very seriously. Between the money made at the school and donations, a fundraiser in May for the Ayers family helped Sticker more than $32,000. The Schick family also rescued one of their dogs, a mixed-breed named Jerry.

Calling this "retirement," Schick and his wife are giving the distinctive recognition of owning and operating the first active winery in Montgomery County. After purchasing a dairy farm in 1998, the couple went right to work.

"It was 1999 when my wife and I put the first 2,000 vines in," said Schick. "We have 28 and a half acres here for grapes.”

With close to 30 different types of grapes, including St. Croix and Ste. Pepin, the vineyard is also home to apple trees and elderberry plants. While the vineyard is not fully organic, the Schick’s have not sprayed Roundup in over six years. "All it does is poison the ground," he said.

Schick family also rescued one of their dogs, a mixed breed named Joey. "This is a three-generational winemaker, but the first in the family to actually do it commercially," I learned from my father and my grandfather," he said. "I started making wine when I was about that big," he said, holding his hand about four feet from the ground. "I was the griller. My dad would tell me to do something and I’d just do it."

Schick seems to always talk about his job and takes pride in the fact that he is the only business on this side of the state that commercially sells dandelion wine. With a plethora of specialty wines ranging from elderberry to garlic ginger, he is presently getting ready to add a new bottle to his collection.

"Right now we have 19 different varieties. We even have a tomato one with serrano pepper that tastes just like salsa," said Schick. "And in September and October we have a new one coming out — a watermelon wine.”

Schick said this year’s weather had delayed grape picking, but he knows he has a lot to look forward to in the coming weeks.

"They’ll probably turn ripe fast and then we’ll be scrambling like crazy," he said.

Schick. 51, said he is appreciative of the community's support and encouragement.

"I'll be next September that we've owned this place 20 years," he said. "I will get a lot of locals who support us. The town really supports us here.

Red Sox beat Yankees 5-1, move 5 games up in AL East

By JIMMY GOLEN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — Jackie Bradley Jr. knows all about the Fenway Park triangle, and how long it can take to get to the city from the airport. The flight to New York is a little over two hours, and Bradley added an R1L single in the sixth to help the Red Sox beat the Yankees 5-1 on Sunday and extend their margin in the AL East to five games.

"It's not what you want," New York manager Joe Girardi last year. "I'm sure this year will be a lot different. We still have to go to the place it means something. We probably had a chance to win two of the six and we split up winning two of the six — and that's frustrating."

Kenseth puts on brave face as he's being shown the door

Bristol, Tenn. (AP) — It could have gotten very uncomfortable for Josh Jones and Matt Kenseth sat side-by-side shortly after an intriguing race at Bristol Motor Speedway. Both drivers wanted to win for very different reasons, both came up short, then circumstances put them together in a post-race news conference.

Jones, the rookie, was seeking his first Cup Series victory Saturday night. He wound up second to Kyle Busch, his soon-to-be teammate at Joe Gibbs Racing. He signed, shivered, the pole, the last lap, and really needed to win that to keep him into NASCAR’s playoffs.

Kenseth hasn’t won a Cup race in a little over a year and also could find an automatic berth into the playoffs. He’s averaging a hallowed ground in racing Bristol. A win that took Kenseth from contention to a fourth-place finish, and also could use an automatic berth into the playoffs.

But Kenseth smiled, cracked jokes, ribbed Jones a little bit and assured everyone that everything is just fine.

“I don’t really have anything to be unhappy about,” he said. “We had a real good year, a lot of fun here this year. Fonda is our 20th of the season,” Fuller said during the championship ceremonies. “This is our first win in a regular-scheduled event in 2010. Or 2014. And then he left.

Fuller ended third behind the champ, Ryan Blaney, who won the race.

Champagne is sprayed in victory lane during the track championship celebration Saturday night at Fonda Speedway. It was a huge win for Blaney, who stepped up in for late, but also in ample time to see the front of the sportswriter’s divisions at Fonda Speedway.

Brock, a two-time Daytona 500 winner and former Cups champion, is a hallowed ground in racing Bristol. A win that took Kenseth from contention to a fourth-place finish, and also could use an automatic berth into the playoffs.

Good Samaritan impresses Mott in final breeze before Travers

Staff Report

Good Samaritan is making his final breeze before the Grade 1 Travers Stakes Saturday, and the 4-year-old horse likely couldn’t have gotten off to a better start in his last ramp-up before his first start in Saratoga’s Grade 1, $1.25 million Travers Stakes Aug. 21.

Good Samaritan, trained by Bob B. Lamb and owned by a partnership led by Rep. Elissa Slotkin, D-Mich., went a half-mile in 46.96 on the main track.

"He’ll go to the gate well," said Roger Mott, who trains the horse for owner Robert Frankel.

"I think he’s in good form. He ran well in previous breezes and the horse has really trained very, very well. He’s ready to run a good one," Mott stated.

"I think he’s ready to run a good race. He’s showed his best in his last couple of breezes. He doesn’t seem to have a problem with his way of going," said Slotkin.

"The horse has been in top form and very consistent. He’s been a little more mentally dialed in than he was a few weeks ago. He’s ready to run a big one," said Slotkin.

"He’s a good, solid type of horse that’s been very consistent and very solid. He’s ready to run a good race," said Slotkin.

"He has been showing a lot of good form and is ready to run a good race," said Slotkin.

The Hitman’s Bodyguard’ outdoes ‘Logan Lucky’ at box office

By LINDSEY BAHN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Critics loved “Logan Lucky” and gave it a big collective cheer to “The Hitman’s Bodyguard,” but when it came to the test of the marketplace, audiences went their own way.

The boy acts flocked for this weekend, and “The Hitman’s Bodyguard” trumped the box office with a chart-topping $21.6 million against a studio estimate Sunday, while “Logan Lucky” spotlessly earned $18.1 million.

Both had notable stars, “Logan Lucky” has Channing Tatum and Daniel Craig, while “The Hitman’s Bodyguard” has Ryan Reynolds and Samuel L. Jackson. Both were opening in over 3,000 theaters and both cost around $30 million to produce.

Also, both were targeted toward audiences, although one was a Remake ("The Hitman’s Bodyguard") and one PG-13 ("Logan Lucky").

But when it came to reviews, critics vastly preferred “Logan Lucky” over its R-rated rival with 89 percent Rotten Tomatoes score, while “The Hitman’s Bodyguard” rests at a "rotten" 99 percent. And in a rare occurrence for the genre, audiences on the whole put their dollars toward “The Hitman’s Bodyguard.”

Even the Cleveland Cavaliers’ NBA Championship run, which included the notorious "Lucky" B for both, wasn’t enough to propel the movie to a future world of 30 million.

Like all box-office discernible cast movies, audiences looked at them three distinctive ways in the marketplace and made a decision, said Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst for comScore: "For audiences she their favorite movie of the fun of it... ("The Hitman’s Bodyguard") was a perfect filter, the perfect escape.

Logan, which celebrated the “Hitman’s Bodyguard,” expects the

"Jerry’ said it was "wrong," repeating the worst five words ever to coin a tweet alone.

DEAR ABBY: I am a recovering drug addict. I have slipped, as many do, but I have been clean for four years now. The problem is my family. If I took tire, trip over my own two feet (I’m clumsy) or just don’t want to be around people, I get questioned, yelled at, accused, etc. Abby, they do random drug screens at my job. I have passed every one, and I have made amends for my past wrongdoings. But the last time I was accused, after trying to express my feelings calmly, I exploded and vented my frustration. Now my family won’t have anything to do with me. Truth be told, since the breakup, I have experienced a boost in self-esteem, but I miss them. I have apologized, but they still won’t talk to me.

How many times must I swallow my pride and ask their forgiveness? They say I’m in the wrong. Is it wrong that I’ve had enough?
