State Police identify victims from fatal Schoharie limo crash

BY JOHN PURCELL Recorder News Staff

Half of the 20 limousine passengers claimed in the fatal Schoharie crash lived within Montgomery and Fulton counties, New York State Police confirmed, along with others who were connected to the region.

State Police issued a statement Tuesday disclosing identities of the limousine driver and passengers along with two pedestrians killed during Saturday’s fatal crash.

Family members and social media posts had revealed most victims, but authorities wanted to confirm identities until all families were notified.

All the passengers were killed, including a former Marine who served in Iraq, a professor of geology, a pair of newlyweds and four sisters celebrating the birthday of one of their own.

The limousine was being driven by Scott Lisinicchia, a 53-year-old from Lake George, transporting the party along with others who were connected to the region.

Lisinicchia was driving the limousine that ran through a stop sign Saturday at the bottom of a T-intersection in the town of Schoharie.

All 17 passengers were killed: Axel J. Steenburg, 29, of Amsterdam; Richard M. Steenburg, 34, of Johnstown; Amy L. Steenburg, 29, of Amsterdam; Allison King, 31, of Ballston Spa; Mary E. Deyon, 34, of Watertown; Robert J. Deyon, 34, of Watertown; Abigail M. Jackson, 34, of Amsterdam; Adam G. Jackson, 34, of Amsterdam; Matthew W. Cowens, 27, of Johnstown; Savannah D. Barrese, 24, of Johnstown; Patricia K. Cushing, 31, of Troy; Amanda D. Halise, 26, of Troy; Erin R. McGowan, 34, of Amsterdam; Shana T. McGowan, 30, of Amsterdam; Amanda R. McGowan, 29, of Amsterdam; and Axel J. Steenburg, 29, of Amsterdam.

The two pedestrians killed were Michael C. Cavosie, 30, of Waterford; and Michael C. Cavosie, 30, of Waterford; and Michael C. Cavosie, 30, of Waterford; and Michael C. Limo driver’s family believes he was given unsafe vehicle

BY MICHAEL HILL Recorder News Staff

SOCHEARIE — Relatives of the limousine driver involved in a crash that killed 20 people in upstate New York said Tuesday they believe he was unwittingly assigned an unsafe vehicle.

The family of Scott Lisinicchia released a statement through a lawyer shortly after another attorney representing the limousine company, Prestige Limousine, said the driver might have been unfamiliar with the vehicle.

Lisinicchia was driving the limousine that ran through a stop sign Saturday at the bottom of a T-intersection in a rural road near Albany. Two pedestrians and all 18 people in the limo celebrating a woman’s birthday died.

The statement from Lisinicchia’s lawyer said he would never have “knowingly put others in harm’s way” and customarily did not cross the state line.

“Even if the repairs were made, the limo represents Prestige, told CBS News in a statement through a lawyer. “We have sent in an expert to do a complete inspection of the vehicle and the cleared vehicle for service was ‘cata

F-FCS board recognized for hard work in district

BY WINNIE BLACKWOOD Recorder News Staff

FONDA — Fonda-Fultonville Central School District’s Board of Education were recognized for their countless efforts in making the district a better place for students and staff.

Superintendent Thomas Ciaccio took the time to recognize Board of Education members during a Board meeting, following a recognition dinner for the board as another way to say “thank you” for the hard work that they put into the district. Board members include President Matt Sullivan, Vice President Bonnie Couture, Director Dan Natale, Donna Espinoza, Frank Vastano, Pat Steenburg, Richard Steenburg, and Michael Lewis.

“... All the things they do to advocate for our children,” Ciaccio said. “This job is not easy. It’s time consuming. It not only impacts meetings that they have to come to and they are out in the community. They talk with community members. They answer phone calls.”

Ciaccio also commended board members for their work since they enlarger their time.

“From our heart and our soul, we appreciate everything that each of you do for the school district, the students of the school district, our school community and our family,” Ciaccio said. “Thank you very much.14-year-old stepson.

Walleye challenge gives back to Great Sacandaga Lake

GLOVERSVILLE—Representatives of the Tenth Annual Walleye Ice Fishing Tournament presented a $1,030 check, as well as 2,250 walleye, to the Great Sacandaga Lake Fisheries Federation at a recent ceremony held at the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce.

The tournament registered 1,705 fishing enthusiasts with approximately 54 percent of the participants from outside of Fulton County. The walleye was donated either as a food product, bedroom, cleaning and detailing handicap accessible vans, a greenhouse, and work studies for properties throughout Fulton and Montgomery counties.

As a company commander for Company K, 2-108th Infantry and to report to him in the headquarters, the first of our troops deployed for the National Guard in 1988 when he enlisted in the United States Army.

In Fultonville, the Anderson-Negele employees will be working on medical equipment, cleaning and detailing handicap accessible vans, a greenhouse, and work studies for properties throughout Fulton and Montgomery counties.

Liberty ARC sites supporting multiple projects like upgrading garden beds, cleaning and detailing handicap accessible vans, a greenhouse, and work studies for properties throughout Fulton and Montgomery counties.

The Anderson-Negele team and I am pleased to extend our tradition of support to our local organization, Liberty ARC. I am honored to be a member of our business and we are excited about the partnership with another Northville resident and Iraq veteran, Vanessa Carey, who has been recognized by the Army Guard’s almost 50 years of service; Kathy Jensen for 20 years of service; Kelly Phillips for 15 years of service; Cassandra Holt and Dennis Thompson for 15 years of service; Marianne Suchowski for 20 years of service; Kelly Phillips for 15 years of service; and Stella Zanella for 40 years of service.

The Employee of the Year, Vanessa Carey, was recognized with a plaque, presented by Deputy Executive Director/CEO, Anne Black. The other nominees, Morgan G. Boshart Award, Mrs. Billie Messer, Manager of Finance and Controller, received a plaque and Vanessa Carey, Colonic, and Patrick Martin for five years of service.

In the latest shake-up for President Donald Trump's administration, U.N. Ambassador Nikki Haley abruptly announced Tuesday in a video message that she is headed to the private sector. "As of today, I am no longer in the Trump administration," she said, referring to her time at the U.N. "I am at peace with my time here, as well as her time at the U.N. I am confident that my next chapter will be equally rewarding for me and energize it into the future." Trump administration was made official now since Haley is staying at the time on tour in India and North Korea.

The news blindsided some key U.S. allies and many close associates who said they had been assured she was staying on at least until the end of the year. In this age of partisan bickering in Washington, we’re pleased to spotlight an indefatigable cross-party cooperation on a national crisis: opioid abuse."

Considering the serious nature of the issue, we urge our readers to make it easier for first responders to obtain naloxone, an anti-overdose treatment, and to increase research into non-opioid pain treatment as an alternative to legally addictive drugs. The bill also offers greater support for those who are in treatment. For example, two Supreme Court justices — Brett Kavanaugh and Chief Justice John Roberts — have spoken out against the administration’s push to push the spontaneous protest back — a thin line between Judge Kavanaugh’s judicial integrity and his future: his pledge to allegience to the Constitution. Eventually, the chill and the hatred that arise from this time, and the hatred that the citizens without their right to vote, even though no more than 30 ballots. He was confirmed by an legislative body so anti-electoral college a big win."

Michael Ukaj

Ukaj, a Johnstown resident and former Marine, was killed in an accident on his 34th birthday, his mother told The Recorder.

Mary Adams said her son joined the Marines at 17 years old, had post-traumatic stress disorder and had been discharged because of a medical condition. He had lived in Troy, according to family and friends.

She said she had called her son on his birthday but could not reach him.

"We love you and miss you, our dear baby boy," Adams wrote in a Facebook post on Monday. "You were such an inspiration and hope to all who know you."

The cause of death has not been released.

Amanda Halse and Patrick Cushing

Halse, 26, a waitress in Watervliet, was killed in an accident on her 34th birthday, her brother said in a Facebook post.

"She was the ultimate teammate. After games, he was the consummate sportsman. Friends and family say Adam was "a leader on the field and the field off the field," according to family reports.

"He was the ultimate teammate," said Kevin Cushing, his son. "He was a leader on the field and the field off the field," according to family reports.

"He was the consummate sportsman," said Steve Klein, associate executive director of programs at the seminary. "That heart propelled Swept our fellow colleagues. That's just the kind of person that you loved working with," he said.

Rachel Cavosie

Facebook posts by relatives say Cavosie, 30, of Watervliet, was "a lady that touched many lives." She was the president of the seminary's Employee of the Year awards.

"On behalf of the Hartwick College community, I extend our sincere condolences to the family and friends of Adam Jackson and his wife, Abby. We are saddened by the loss of their colleague, Adam Jackson, and his wife."

"Adam was a true example of a life well-lived. He was an avid sports fan and an active member of the local community. He will be deeply missed by all who knew him."

"He will always be remembered as a dedicated professional, a great teacher, and a caring colleague."

"Our thoughts and prayers are with his family and loved ones during this difficult time."

3 local golfers advance in qualifier

Staff Report

ALTAMONT — Broadalbin-Perth's Evan Bait and Saratoga's Nolan Crowley were among the top nine 36-hole scores Tuesday in the Section II state golf qualifying tournament thanks to their performances Tuesday in the Section II Class A/B/C/D Playoffs at Orchard Creek Golf Club. Bait, who played in the state tournament this past June, shot a round of 80 to finish in a tie for 11th in Tuesday's play. Bait and Wager each carded an 84 to tie for 18th. The top 24 players from Tuesday's regional advance to next Saturday's state qualifier. The top two 36-hole scores combined between Tuesday and Friday will represent Section II at the state tournament next June. Saratoga's Nolan Crowley of Ballston Lake had a 79 and tied for Tuesday's low round of 79.

Two other local players also took part in Tuesday's competition, with Canajoharie's Derek Countryman shooting 93 and Conner Canie of B-P shooting 94.

Giant’s believe breakout near is despite 1-4 record

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It’s hard to say whether the New York Giants are engaging in wishful thinking or there is something to their optimism these days.

The reality is the Giants have a 1-4 record heading into Thursday night’s game against the Super Bowl champion Philadelphia Eagles (2-3) and they are facing knee odds in a bid to make the playoffs in coach Pat Shurmur’s first season.

The struggling Eagles have beaten New York in their last three meetings and seven of the last eight. The Giants are stum- ming off an excruciating last-sec- ond, 33-31 loss to Carolina on a 63-yard field goal by Graham Gano, and now they have to rebound with three days of prepa-

But the Giants believe there is reason for hope. Their offense scored 30 points for the first time since the end of the 2015 season. The team rallied from a 1-point fourth-quarter deficit to take a lead with just over a minute to play, only to be denied by a near-record kick. And they did all this despite dealing with some ill-chosen winds by star receiver Odell Beckham Jr., about Eli Manning and the team’s heart in the wake of a near-record loss. Next step for NBA is hiring women in positions of power

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — San Antonio Spurs coach Gregg Popovich sees one simple way for women to break into NBA and women to mark real progress in the league.

"I think there just has to be more," said Popovich, who during the offseason promoted assistant coach Becky Hammon, moving her one step closer to a head coaching seat. "There is some black smoke out there. I think people are noticed and given the opportunity by people who are wise enough and courageous enough to do it and just get out of the old paradigm.

"And not just on the bench, but on the business side of the NBA as well.

The NBA routinely gets high marks for its diversity efforts and is widely viewed as a leader on social issues. Still, NBA Commissioner Adam Silver believes the league needs to do better, and he made his feelings known in a memo to teams in the wake of the Dallas Mavericks’ embroiled scandal.

Several NBA teams tout statistics about women in their workforce, but beyond that — including coaches, managing partners and players owners — the next step for the league seems to be more women in positions of power such as CEOs and COO.

Memphis guard Mike Conley said it’s important for basketball, business and society itself to have women in positions of authority.

"We welcome it, and we do want to see more of that," Conley said. "I think that will help bridge that gap, that area and all the things that have been happening with the Me Too and situations like that and hopefully that will continue to progress.

The NBA earned an A- for racial hiring practices last summer. It earned an F for diversity this summer from The Institute for Diversity and Ethics in Sports. That puts the NBA slightly above "other professional sports, even as the number of women on the team level dropped for a third straight year with the percentage of women in team vice presidents and professional staff dipping as well, according to the report’s author, Richard Lapchick.

When the NBA began investigating reports of sexual harassment and improper workplace conduct involving the former team president, the Mavericks did not have one woman at the executive level. Owner Mark Cuban hired former AT&T senior executive Cynthia Marshall as CEO and president in February, promoted four women to executive roles and now has eight women among 18 leadership roles.

"A memo distributed by The Associated Press last month shows the NBA plans workshops in Atlanta and Los Angeles in mid-November on the diversity and inclusion efforts. The NBA also set up an anonymous tip line after the Memo’s story broke. NBA teams surveyed by The Associated Press say they’re already being held sessions on workplace conduct and putting women in leadership roles.

In Peru in the 2000s, Fany Loza represented the Nets on the Board of Governors before leaving last year and was replaced by a woman as president of the company that runs the Nets, Barclays Center and Nassau Coliseum. The Toronto Raptors’ Teresa Reiche as vice president in basketball operations and player development, and Dr. Laos Collinson is the medical officer for both the Raptors and the WNBA’s Liberty.

"I think it adds a viewpoint, a skillset that is very beneficial for the teams," Wallace said. Silver wants to see more hiring of women, adding "it has to happen now," so the NBA is going to help. The NBA plans an event at the All-Star break in Charlotte, North Carolina, in February to prove "the pipeline of female talent in basketball operations roles." Lapchick said hiring women has to be a combination efforts by both the NBA and its teams.

"It’s not the result in Dallas with no women in leadership to stop/continue bad behavior, which I believe is not uncommon among leadership in the workplace in real life and sports," Lapchick told the AP. "Adam’s has the respect to push and I am impressed by the NBA’s actions after the decline in gender grade when the Report Card was published and I saw the investigation in Dallas."

Amsterdam improves to 6-0 on the season.

Amsterdam (4-2) collected six hits off of Catskill pitching. Ryan Savoie pitched the game to go 5-0 on the season with a 25-12, 25-18, 25-19, 25-14 and 25-22.

Amsterdam was led by three kills and an ace from OESJ. Armao contributed four kills and 12 assists among the victims of the crash. The grief is still very tangible a week after that, it’s really hit home, and we really missed them that day,” Amsterdam senior kicker Deliana Figueroa said. “Our days have kept things in perspective for us,” Amsterdam senior midfielder and captain Kayli Hoefs said. “The events of the past several days have kept things in perspective for me and wanted to be a part of it.”

Casey Simmons had six kills and Sophia in sixth, Skylar Grybos in eighth, and Polly Hines in 23rd.

Emily Mormando added 19 assists, five aces from Meadow Arduini.

Gloversville, 6 p.m.

B-P’s scoring contingent consisted of Jimmy Shumaker in second, Danny Dylong in second, Preston Hadley in third, Dan Scopo in fourth, Danny Dylong in second, and Adan Vasquez made eight saves in goal.

The first 10 minutes of the second half of the Dragonsagned lead 1-0 after an Angel Anderson goal 30 minutes into the game, and by time 10 minutes elapsed in the second half the lead was 6-1.

Anderson set up Louns to make it 2-0, then Kendal Laverty and Louns both forced turnovers that resulted in goals two minutes apart to put the Dragons ahead 5-0.

We were playing our hearts out. We win at lose, we did it for the [victims of the crash],” Hoefs said. “It was with respect towards them. We played for them tonight.”

Agholor had 81 yards in a 38-14 victory over Tennessee, which were his only catches in the last two games because of an injury that will impact us less moving forward," Eagles head coach Doug Pederson said. "Jay is a big part of what we do offensively. We need him to play well and we need him to play healthy."

The Eagles have a few big matchups this week against the Saints defense, with a chance to win the division on Sunday. They also have to deal with the New Orleans defense, which is struggling to get out of their own way.

In this Oct. 27, 2017, file photo, Kansas City Chiefs defensive end Allen Bailey places his hand on the shoulder of Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Nick Foles as he walks off the field following an NFL football game in Kansas City, Mo. Foles has been benched in favor of last year's starter, Carson Wentz. Philadelphia Eagles are planning to move on from Wentz after Saturday's game against the San Francisco 49ers. Foles led the Eagles to Super Bowl LII last season, but has struggled this year. He has completed 51.6% of his passes with five touchdowns and nine interceptions. He's also fumbled twice, leading to two turnovers.

The Eagles released running back Wendell Smallwood and fullback Rocky Kolb on Tuesday. Smallwood was a fifth-round pick in the 2016 NFL draft and appeared in 21 games over the last two seasons. He played in 12 games last season, and was given the starting job after the release of Darren Sproles. Kolb was a fifth-round pick in the 2012 NFL draft and appeared in 30 games over four seasons. He played in 12 games last season, and was given the starting job after the release of LeGarrette Blount.

The Eagles' roster overhaul has included the release of several key players, including running back LeGarrette Blount, offensive tackle Jordan Mailata, and backup quarterback Matt McGloin. The team has also traded safety Mychal Kendricks and cornerback Ronald Darby, and is expected to release receiver Nelson Agholor and safety Eric Rowe.

The Eagles' defense has struggled this season, allowing 28.5 points per game, which is the second-worst in the NFL. The team's secondary has been particularly vulnerable, with opposing quarterbacks completing 71% of their passes against the Eagles this year. The defense has allowed 224.9 rushing yards per game, which is the second-highest in the NFL.

The Eagles have lost five of their last six games, including a 41-34 loss to the Tennessee Titans on Sunday. They are currently tied for first place in the NFC East with the Dallas Cowboys, who won 24-6 on Sunday. The Eagles have a bye week next week, before hosting the New York Giants on Thanksgiving Day. The Giants are currently 6-5 and struggling offensively, averaging just 19.6 points per game.

The Eagles' biggest challenge this season has been their inability to consistently score points. They have scored 20 points or fewer in seven of their last eight games, and have struggled to generate consistent offensive production. The team has averaged 192.6 yards passing and 193.6 yards rushing per game, which are the seventh and eighth lowest in the NFL, respectively.

The Eagles have also struggled on defense, allowing 378.4 yards per game, which is the fourth-highest in the NFL.

The Eagles' season is all but over, and they have little to play for in their final two games. They are currently 6-6 and have already been eliminated from playoff contention.
John Prine, Stevie Nicks, Def Leppard among 15 acts nominated for Rock Hall of Fame induction

By RANDY LEWIS
Los Angeles Times

The slate of final nominees for 2019 induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame runs from pop-R&B superstar Janet Jackson and influential German ’80s band Kraftwerk to English hard rock band Def Leppard, Detroit proto-punk band MC5, and critically acclaimed Chicago singer-songwriter John Prine. The list of 15 nominees appearing for the first time on the ballot includes: Def Leppard, Prine, DirecTV, Def Leppard and Roy Orbison. Nicks is alone in the 2019 class for induction a second time. She was selected for the Hall of Fame in 1998 as a member of Fleetwood Mac. If elected, she’ll be the first female artist inducted twice.

The spectrum, the multiple genres of music—it’s a great snapshot of how big the tent is for rock ‘n’ roll.' Hall of Fame President/CEO Sue B Zimmerman told The Times on Monday.

“For us to go from the Zombies to Radialhead is pretty wild, but to include Cool, Cold and Janet Jackson and MC5 in the same sentence is pretty exciting and powerful. In addition, some of our first-time nominees are second-tier artists—those musicians’ musicians, songwriter’s songwriters—like Todd Rundgren, John Prine and Roy Orbison,” Zimmerman added.

The constructors will be announced in December after being voted on by about 1,000 members of the Cleveland-based Rock Hall, including artists, managers, historians, critics and other members of the music industry. That body has been evolving over the three decades since the hall was launched in 1983.

“The hall’s share of the voting body remains the inductions,” Harris said. “As Pearl Jam has come in, Getting into the hall now is harder because there are more musicians, more songwriters. So it’s a smaller group.”

To be eligible, an artist’s first commercial recording must have been released at least 25 years earlier, making 1994 the cutoff year for nominees for next year’s ceremony. The 2019 induction dinner and ceremony is scheduled for March 29 at Barclays Center in Brooklyn. Ticket information will be announced in January.

Even though, statistically speaking, the fan vote doesn’t significantly affect the final count, it has increasingly become a gauge among musicians and the pool of fans who has closely mirrored the final results.

In 2017, four of the six nominees finished near the top of the fan poll. Last year, four of the top five fans voted made it into the hall. Fan voting takes place at the Rock Hall’s official website.

By aggregating the fan vote, it does give some direction early in the process,” Harris said. “The fans are diverse, and so is the voting body, so there are a lot of different areas they’re passionate about.”

Fox News draws a big audience for final Kavanaugh vote

NEW YORK (AP) — The Senate’s vote confirming Supreme Court Justice Kavanaugh to the seat left open by retiring Justice Anthony Kennedy, which recorded its biggest Saturday audience in more than a decade. Fox’s starting audience was bigger than any for the network, since Hurricane Katrina in 2005, when its Saturday prime-time lineup included the final episodes of two Fox series, the special “The King of Queens” and the final episode of the animated “Bottom.”

Kavanaugh’s victory after a lengthy confirmation battle benefited the network, which is a favorite of people friendly to his cause.

Fox reached 4.34 million viewers for the Senate vote. Rivals CNN and MSNBC combined had less than half of that audience, as many of Kavanaugh’s opponents clearly couldn’t stomach watching the vote.

It was close on Friday for what proved the decision moment when Maine Sen. Susan Collins announced her choice, insuring that Kavanaugh’s nomination would succeed. At that hour, Fox had 3.27 million viewers, CNN had 1.57 million and MSNBC had 1.36 million, Nielsen said.

Kavanaugh’s nomination received more coverage on the broadcast evening news programs than any other Supreme Court nominee over the past 30 years, wiping the previous record involving Clarence Thomas, according to news analyst Andrew Tyndall.

These numbers don’t even take into account cable news and its endless coverage. Fox and MSNBC didn’t exist at the time of Thomas’s nomination.

Meanwhile, NBC scored a prime-time victory over CBS for the second week of the television season.

Sunday night NFL football on NBC provided the margin, but the network is also showing strength with entertainment offerings.

The new drama “Manifest” appears to be a hit. Its debut episode was viewed in some eight million times within a week on a time-shifted basis, second only to “Roseanne” for the biggest such “lift” for a show this season.

For the work, NBC averaged 7.5 million viewers in prime-time. That was second with 6.9 million. Fox had 5 million. ABC had 4.7 million, Univision had 1.3 million, Telefutura and the Ion Network had 1.2 million and the CW had 704,000.

Fox News was the most popular cable network, averaging 3.38 million viewers in prime-time. ESPN was second with 2.12 million, TBS had 2.08 million, FX had 1.52 million and USA had 1.12 million. The Associated Press’ “World News Tonight” topped the evening newscasts with an average of 8.3 million viewers.

NBC’s “Nightly News” was second with 7.6 million and the “CBS Evening News” had 5.1 million.

For the week of Oct. 1-7, the top 10 shows, their networks and viewership: NFL Football: Dallas at Houston, NBC, 18.59 million; NFL Football: Kansas City at Denver, ESPN, 13.54 million; NFL Football: Indianapolis at New England, Fox, 13.27 million; Sunday Night NFL: Pittsburgh, MNF, 12.72 million; “The Big Bang Theory,” CBS, 12.5 million; “NCIS,” CBS, 12.1 million; “The O’Fallon,” Fox, 10.79 million; “Young Sheldon,” CBS, 10.6 million; “The Voice” (Monday), NBC, 10.06 million; “The Voice” (Tuesday), NBC, 9.4 million.
DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 27 years and have three wonderful kids. The youngest is 16. I recently found out I may have another son from a relationship prior to my marriage. The woman involved notified me or asked for child support. I found out through someone else a couple of months ago. I love my wife, she did not want to discuss the possibility. She acts like nothing happened. Would it be right for me to tell her what the friend told me and ask her to find him and look at his picture? He possibly thinking the boy was his, it could be either the man who raised him, possibly the father or from the man who raised him. I do not want the news, it might be better to reach out to the woman. I do not want to cause another person grief.
